

Main rules of Financial competence

Where there is success, there is always a mentor: No matter how educated and smart you are, you can't do without a mentor. The mentor will cut the path to your dream and help you avoid mistakes.

If you want quick success, watch people who are successful. Decide where you want to be in your financial affairs and in your career: Observe successful people and determine the circle of people from which you can choose the appropriate person to learn from.

The five smart questions:

How long can you live on the savings if you lose your job (source of income)?

Are you saving enough? Do you think you could put off more?

Do you have a financial plan?

How much are you willing to risk?

Are you satisfied with your current income level?

Have a financial plan to multiply money, increase income, and savings: It's better to have a plan to multiply money, increase income, and savings, rather than a plan to spend money.

Let's repeat what we learned:

- Success comes with a mentor who guides and helps you to avoid mistakes.
- To achieve quick success, observe successful people in your desired field and choose a suitable mentor.
- Five smart questions to ask yourself for financial success:
 - How long can you live on savings if you lose your job?
 - Are you saving enough? Can you save more?
 - Do you have a financial plan to multiply money, increase income, and savings?
 - Are you consciously managing your money and limiting expenses?
 - Are you doing more than expected in your work and personal life?
- Multiply your money.
