THE LEGEND

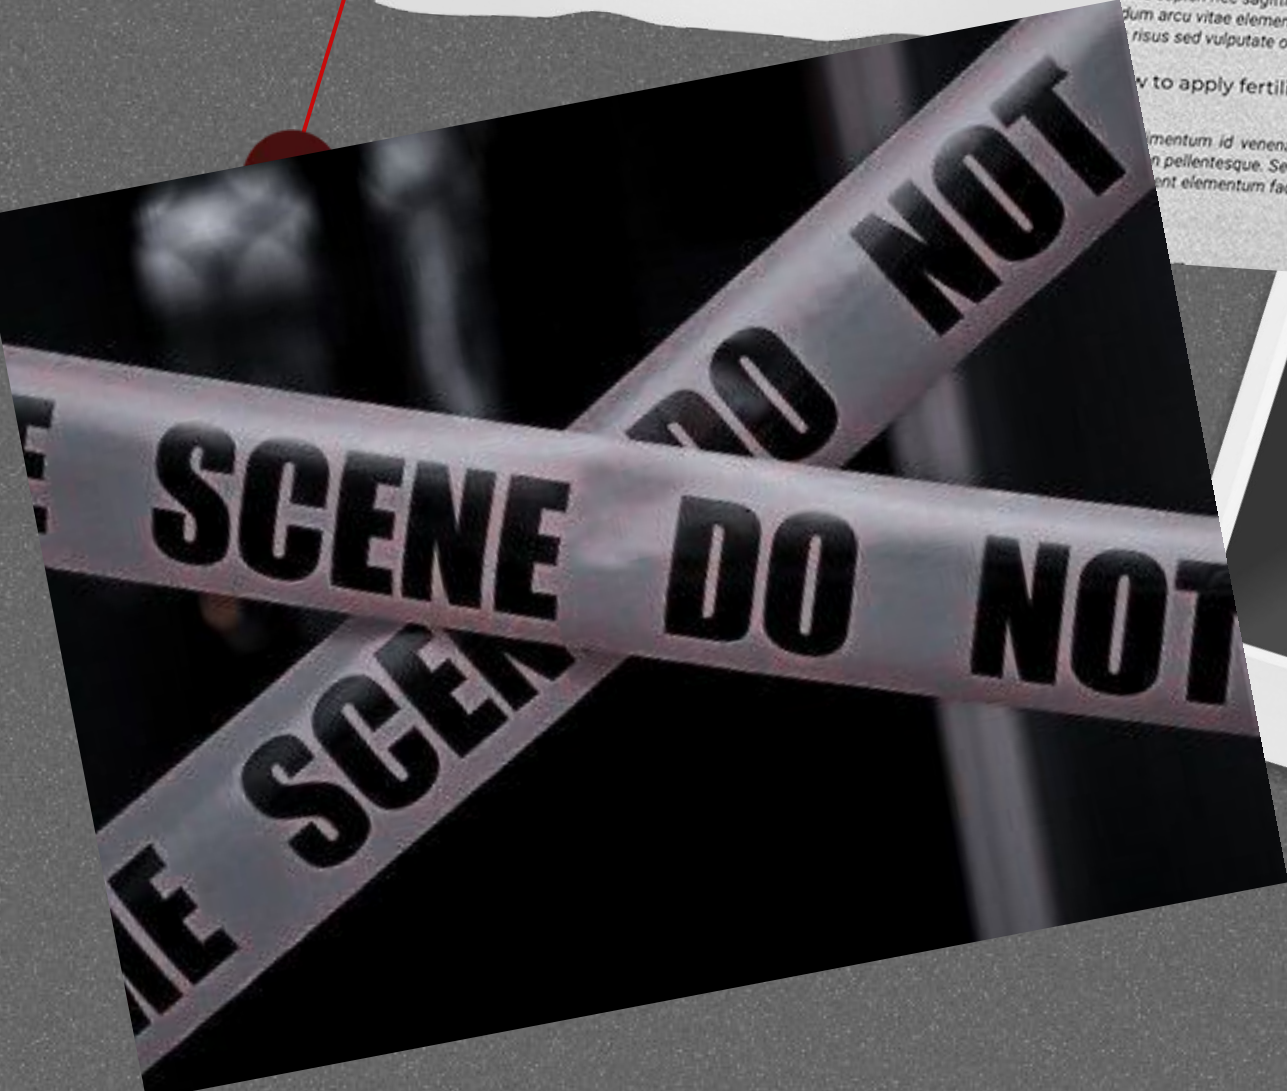

04

“A creepy guy, on Halloween, dressed oddly, throwing hatchets at people...it’s just too bizarre to possibly be true,” says Fairfax County Archivist Brian Conroy. “But it is.”

In the early 20th century, deep in the woods that divided the town of Clifton from Fairfax Station, there was an asylum for the insane. Many of the convicts escaped, but were caught—but one, Douglas Grifon. For months, the police searched for Grifon, but he was never found. To this day, it’s said that if you are at Bunny Man Bridge at midnight on Halloween night, you too will meet the fate of those teens and rabbits. The bunnymen attacks people around Colchester Overpass, a Southern Railway in most legends.

In the evening of October 19, 1970 the first incident was reported, by U.S. Air Force Academy Cadet Robert Bennett and his fiancée, who were visiting relatives on Guinea Road in Burke
